The Iowa Association of Building Officials (IABO) is a nonprofit organization established in 1959 by local building officials for the purpose of improving the quality and uniformity of building regulations throughout the state. IABO is a chapter affiliate of the International Code Council (ICC), publisher of the International family of construction codes.

The major goal of IABO is to promote public health, safety and welfare through the proper enforcement of building codes. In addition to building officials and inspectors, the organization also encourages membership by individuals from other segments of the building construction industry (e.g. design professionals, contractors, manufacturer's representatives, materials suppliers, etc.).

Bimonthly meeting programs attempt to focus on code related educational needs of the membership and cover a wide variety of technical, legal and administrative subjects. Code interpretations and reviews, new materials and methods of construction, liability, state laws and code revisions are some of the subjects frequently addressed.

In the fall and winter months, IABO sponsors educational seminars that address code change matters, code training, and training in many areas of construction and code interpretation and enforcement.

The membership fee includes the cost of the bimonthly meetings and allows for discounted fees for IABO sponsored educational seminars.

IABO meets the second Thursday of the odd numbered months.
